Study: Sweetener could be used as a pesticide

Bad diet. A Drexel biologist's son discovers that artificial sweeteners kills flies.

For his sixth-grade science project at Masterman School, then 11-year-old Simon Kaschock-Marenda wondered if his parents' dietary decisions could also affect flies.

And then his project turned into an academic study.

The goal three years ago was to find out how different sweeteners affected the health of fruit flies after his parents, one of whom is Drexel University biologist Daniel Marenda, started to use artificial sweeteners instead of sugar. He chose fruit flies because his father studied them at work.

For the project, Daniel and his son fed the flies various sweeteners, and all of them died within days.

Daniel Marenda asked his colleague Sean O'Donnell what he thought of the discovery.

"I immediately got super excited because I saw the potential for possibly developing this as an insecticide," O'Donnell said.

The result is a study, conducted by Drexel professors, biologists and graduate students and published in the journal PLOS One. It found that Truvia was the deadliest sweetener. Flies that ate the sweetener, which contains the compound erythritol, died in a few days, while other sweeteners killed the flies within weeks.

Unfortunately, Daniel, now 14, didn't win a top prize.

"But we bought him a new laptop," Marenda, his father, said.

Experiment notes

Why the compound killed the flies remains a mystery, O'Donnell said.

- Erythritol has been FDA-approved for humans since 2001.
- Marenda and O'Donnell are hoping to develop artificial sweetener into a baited pesticide.

Man who stole cop car pleads guilty

Blake Bills, who along with girlfriend Shayna Sykes stole a police car and led cops on a chase through two states last year, pleaded guilty on Thursday to carjacking and eluding police, reports say.

The 25-year-old of Macungie, Pennsylvania, now faces up to 17 years in prison for the carjacking, officials said. Reports say he may serve an eight-year concurrent sentence for eluding police.

Bills admitted he stole the car and ran over a police officer, who is still recovering from injuries.

Moo. Animal rights group criticizes Philly farm enforcement

Is Philadelphia the second-worst city in the nation for humane law enforcement of meat-packers?

Farm Sanctuary, an animal rights activism group, sent a letter Thursday criticizing the enforcement practices of the Philadelphia regional office of the U.S. Department of Agriculture's (USDA) Food Safety and Inspection Service (FSIS).

The letter claims that the FSIS issues "noncompliance reports" (NR) for incidents that should have merited a suspension, a $1,000 fine and punishment of up to one year in jail.

In one instance at a Souderton meat packing plant, an FSIS observed an employee unsuccessfully use a "captive bolt stunner" three times on a dairy cow before rendering it unconscious. The plant got an NR.

"This NR documents a variety of egregious violations of federal law and an animal in absolute agony. … Would you please explain to us why this violation did not qualify [for a suspension]?" the letter asks.

FSIS said in a statement that they will refer these cases to the Office of Investigation, Enforcement and Audit (OIEA). SAM NEWHOUSE

Meat packing

Farm Sanctuary says the Philly FSIS has the second highest rate of NRs where suspensions were merited.

- In August 2013, a pig with its throat slit at a Hazleton, Pa., plant, regained consciousness, and was re-stunned. Farm Sanctuary called it "an egregious violation of federal law that warranted suspension."

Illegal

Three nabbed for operating speakeasies

Three men were arrested and charged for illegally operating speakeasies in South Philadelphia, members of Citywide Vice announced on Thursday.

Tonino Irace, 69, of Glenolden, Canio Pascale, 66, of Philadelphia, and Zoheir Mouloudj, 44, also of Philadelphia, were all charged with illegal liquor sales. Irace and Pascale were additionally charged with criminal conspiracy.

Citywide Vice raided Caffe Italia and Mediterranean's of South Philly and confiscated cash and liquor from both. They took $584 from Italia and more than $17,000 from Mediterranean's.

Citywide also confiscated 129 bottles of beer and liquor from Italia and 181 from Mediterranean's. METRO

Facebook. Students posed in teacher's pics

Just days before an eighth-grade special education teacher at a Philadelphia public school in the Northeast was charged with the statutory rape of one of her students, she uploaded photographs to Facebook of herself smiling and surrounded by young teenage males, captioned, "My fav students!"

It is unknown if Stephanie Amato's 14-year-old victim, who prosecutors say Amato had sexual intercourse with between March and April of this year, is pictured on her Facebook profile, which is still party visible to the public.

On the same day, June 3, Amato also uploaded a photo of herself with several of the same students, some of whom are giving the camera the middle finger. That caption is "Fun with these kids!"

Amato's next court date is June 24.

Obama: 'No apologies' on deal to free Bergdahl

Controversy. Some soldiers have alleged that the army sergeant walked away from his unit.

President Barack Obama said on Thursday he would make "no apologies" for agreeing to a deal that released Taliban detainee Sgt. Bowe Bergdahl, despite controversy in Washington that Congress was not notified ahead of time.

"I make absolutely no apologies for making sure that we get back a young man to his parents and that the American people understand that this is somebody's child," Obama said.

Captured in 2009, Bergdahl was freed last week in a controversial prisoner-swap deal that saw five Taliban militants released from the U.S. prison at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, and flown to Qatar. It has been alleged at least six soldiers died trying to find him after he walked away from his unit.

Republican members of Congress have said Obama set a dangerous precedent with the swap for Bergdahl and might have broken the law. REUTERS

Bergdahl improving, hasn't spoken with parents

U.S. Army Sgt. Bowe Bergdahl is showing improvement during his treatment after nearly five years in captivity but has still not spoken with his family, the Pentagon said on Thursday.

Lawyer says he assumes Snowden's asylum will be extended

A lawyer for former U.S. intelligence contractor Edward Snowden told German radio on Thursday that he expected his client's asylum in Russia to be extended beyond July.

"We assume that it will be extended," Wolfgang Kaleck, Snowden's lawyer in Germany, was quoted as saying by Germany's Inforadio.

He added that there was, however, no guarantee this would happen.

Russia granted Snowden a year's asylum in August 2013 despite the United States wanting Moscow to send him home to face criminal charges, including espionage, for disclosing in June secret U.S. Internet and telephone surveillance programs. REUTERS

D-Day. Paratrooper, 93, to jump again for 70th anniversary

Allied commander U.S. Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower gives instructions to paratroopers on June 6, 1944, somewhere in England at the beginning of D-Day landing operations in Normandy. / GETTY IMAGES

Seventy years ago, Jim "Pee Wee" Martin parachuted into France, behind German enemy lines, ahead of the D-Day invasion.

This week, at the age of 93, the World War II veteran from Ohio is jumping into Normandy again to mark the anniversary of the June 6, 1944, sea-borne landings by Allied troops, although this time he will not be making the leap alone.

"They are making me do a tandem," Martin said in a telephone interview. "They are worried about me getting hurt. I said, 'Don't worry about it. If I get hurt or I get killed, what is the difference? I've lived 93 years. I've had a good life.'"

Martin said he was jumping now because he may be the last man from his unit of the 101st Airborne Division to ever do it again.

Martin, who lives near Dayton, said he will use a round canopy parachute like those in World War Two, which drop more quickly than modern parachutes. He is also taking one of his jump jackets from the war to France to display.

A U.S. Veterans Affairs doctor cleared him to make the jump physically and pronounced him mentally fit, he said.

"You might ask some of my friends around here if they believe in that," Martin quipped. "Some of them think that I'm crazy." REUTERS

Hate to be the bearer of bad news, but this is a great way to get a tick. / IMAGE SOURCE

Yuck. Ticks are out and about this season. Learn how to stay safe.

You don't have to traipse through deep-wooded areas to pick up a tick this summer. One can latch onto you in any city park.

"[They lurk] anywhere there's grassy vegetation, but especially where the grass is taller," says Dr. Roberto Posada, an infectious disease specialist at Mount Sinai Hospital in New York City.

The good news is that most tick bites don't make us sick, but they can cause Lyme disease and Rocky Mountain spotted fever.

The first thing to do if you suspect a bite is to wash the area well with soap and water to minimize the risk of bacterial infection. Removing them should be done carefully with tweezers. "They attach by a nozzle, which buries into the skin," says Posada. "Make sure you grab the nozzle and pull straight out — don't pull side to side. You want to get all of the tick out."

LINDA CLARKE

Advice

Keep covered

Tick bite infections are treated with antibiotics. Still, prevention is better, says Posada: "No one wants to wear long sleeves and pants in summer, but clothing forms a barrier. Also, take a shower right after you've been hiking and do a body search."

Tom Cruise tries to get his groove back in the sci-fi action film "Edge of Tomorrow," in which he relives the same day fighting aliens. / WARNER BROS. ENTERTAINMENT

In defense of Tom. The actor has had it rough since his 2005 Oprah incident. That's unfortunate in more ways than one.

Last month in L.A. Weekly, Amy Nicholson made a bold yet hard-to-refute claim: The Internet had unfairly killed our biggest movie star. Tom Cruise's couch-jumping incident from Oprah had been overblown, and we were not judging him for what matters: the quality of his work. He's a versatile performer, all the way up to the new, excellent "Edge of Tomorrow." Here are some of his best roles.

'Jerry Maguire' (1996)

One of his bigger hits, "Jerry Maguire" begins where most early Cruise films end: with the brat tamed and apologetic. But Cruise is endearing as a newly ethical sports agent flailing about — relatable and engagingly human, yet still Tom Cruise. (The guy's still managing athletes and picking which hottie to bang, after all.)

Preppy

'Risky Business' (1983)

In Cruise's breakthrough film, he stars as an MBA-bound kid who befriends a prostitute (Rebecca De Mornay). It had more depth than the typical '80s teen sex comedy.

Serious actor

'Born on the Fourth of July' (1989)

When Oliver Stone cast the star of "Cocktail" to play Vietnam War veteran and activist Ron Kovic, the world scoffed. They were wrong.

Cocksure

'The Color of Money' (1987)

Much of Cruise's early work has him play an overconfident upstart who has to be tamed, usually by an older mentor. But this one put him with Paul Newman and Martin Scorsese.

Action star

'Mission: Impossible' (1996)

It's weird to think that it took until his mid 30s for Cruise to do a proper action film — a genre that has dominated his recent career.

Jerk

'Rain Man' (1988)

Cruise has a confidence and focus that can be scary. Taken to a logical extreme, he can play a real a—hole. And so he was in his first real drama, one of his trickiest performances.

Nervous wreck

'Eyes Wide Shut' (1999)

In Stanley Kubrick's marital drama, the actor has never been funnier as he wanders about New York trying to play it cool and very badly fumbling at getting some tail.

Mega-jerk

'Magnolia' (1999)

"Rain Man" isn't the extreme of Cruise's jerkitude. That would be his electrifying, Oscar-nominated turn as misogynistic self-help guru T.J. Mackey in P.T. Anderson's epic.

Self-aware

'Vanilla Sky' (2001)

Cruise likes to do films that question what makes a movie star. Here, he's gruesomely disfigured. Robbed of his looks, he reveals an ugly, desperate, pathetic monster.

I love you to death

Disease romance. Two kids with cancer flirt and wrestle with dying in "The Fault in Our Stars."

"The Fault in Our Stars" is not your typical disease movie. It's one that thinks it's above disease movies. "Love Story," "Sweet November" and films of that ilk are an obvious influence on this (as well as on "50/50") despite painstaking efforts to assure viewers that they're definitely not one of those kinds of movies. They promise tough talk and an aversion to sentiment, erecting strict rules they will break around the halfway mark.

Based on John Green's best-selling YA novel, "The Fault in Our Stars" tells of Hazel (Shailene Woodley), a longtime cancer sufferer whose steeliness threatens to break when she catches the smirking stares of Augustus (Ansel Elgort), a charming goofball who has lost part of a leg to his disease.

For the most part, "The Fault in Our Stars" remains tough till the end, even after it surrenders to a mess of musical montages set to M83 and a variety of sensitive acoustic guitar-and-piano ballads. (That Hazel briefly sports a Pink Floyd shirt is a cruel tease.) It never wavers in its death talk; it just softens a little. "Pain demands to be felt," reads a line in Hazel's favorite book, and to its credit, the film never forgets that.

It's still a rocky road. A trip to Amsterdam, for example, offers a tragically ill-advised visit to the Anne Frank House, where we're invited to make questionable connections between a young girl dying of cancer and a girl who died young because she was sent to a concentration camp.

The film does mostly recover itself, thanks in large part to its actors. Laura Dern seems to be on hand simply to lend gravitas as Hazel's mom until she's finally, late in, given a meaty scene. It's sappy, but it still goes closer to the brink than most films like it.

Shailene Woodley and Ansel Elgort are cute while talking about how they're going to die young in "The Fault in Our Stars."

Reboot. Tom Cruise's latest is 'Groundhog Day' with aliens

Emily Blunt is a warrior goddess in "Edge of Tomorrow." / DAVID JAMES

"Edge of Tomorrow" is very clever, but it's not original. In fact, it's a bald rip-off of a film that's both: "Groundhog Day." It's just that it's "Groundhog Day" with belligerent, tentacled aliens who are laying siege to the planet. And instead of simply waking up every morning in restart mode, its would-be hero — Tom Cruise's Major Cage, a smirking army propagandist very unwittingly turned freaked-out soldier — is usually melted, run over, crushed, torn apart, feasted upon or shot in the head, execution-style.

The explanation for Cage's rebooting is less elegant than it was in "Groundhog Day," where the reason was that there was no reason. The one here, delayed for exactly long enough, is silly and convoluted, but once you accept it, getting into the groove is both easy and delightful. This is essentially a video game, and an old-school one: the kind where players only have to remember moves and beats. But it knows simply having Cruise's warrior do the same thing until he gets it right would grow quickly tiresome. So it keeps reinventing itself, upping the score.

The thrill of watching "Edge of Tomorrow" isn't just about what's on-screen. It's also about the tension of worrying how long this studio product can sustain its creativity before the execs come in and ruin the fun. It gets about 2/3 of the way there. It also knows, like "Eyes Wide Shut" before it, that it's always a joy to make the cocksure Cruise nervous. Up until its last 20 minutes or so, it's the biggest blast an outsized summer film has been in both recent and not-so-recent memory. MATT PRIGGE

Bieber's adolescent racist streak emerges again

Justin Bieber's past keeps coming back to haunt him, as yet another video has surfaced showing the then-14-year-old singer parodying his "One Less Lonely Girl" hit by using a racist slur instead, according to the Sun. Sources say his team has known about the video for years but refused to pay the $500,000 demanded by whoever ended up leaking it. As is becoming his custom, Bieber was quick to apologize, the second time he's done so for a racist video from his past in less than a week. "Facing my mistakes from years ago has been one of the hardest things I've ever dealt with," he says in the new statement. "But I feel now that I need to take responsibility for those mistakes and not let them linger. … At the end of the day, I just need to step up and own what I did." He might want to save some of that owning, though, as Page Six reports that there could be "15 to 20 more minutes" of footage of Bieber using racial slurs that have yet to be released, footage that "explicitly shows this was more than just one regrettable joke," a source says. Wonder what the next apology will look like.

Dr. Dre, get your money right

If Dr. Dre is looking to downplay reports that he's basically a billionaire now, his latest real estate purchase isn't helping. The rap mogul has reportedly closed on a $40 million mega-mansion in Brentwood, California, according to E! News. Forbes recently listed Dre as the wealthiest hip-hop artist of 2014, with a net worth of $550 million, but a sale of his Beats by Dr. Dre business that's rumored to be in the works could push him past the billion mark.

50 Cent's new 'Power'

50 Cent executive produced "Power" and also appears on the show as Kanan. / STARZ ENTERTAINMENT, LLC

See more at www.metro.us

Double life.
50 Cent's new show takes a look at how hard it is to break away from the gangster life.

"I'm not afraid to die," gasps a bloody man facing the muzzle of drug lord James "Ghost" St. Patrick.

"And I'm not afraid to kill you," comes the answer, with the flash of a bullet.

It's all in a day's work for the star of executive producer Curtis "50 Cent" Jackson's new TV show, "Power," premiering Saturday on Starz. With a beautiful home, respect on the street and the finest duds, Ghost (Omari Hardwick) seems to have it all. But he struggles with finding fulfillment outside of his illicit business; hopes of getting out are snuffed out by his complicit wife, Tasha (Naturi Naughton), and partner in crime, Tommy (Joseph Sikora).

Although "Power" does tread on themes present in the wider gangster-drama genre, it creates a new formula, according to 50 Cent: "The way the actual project was put together, it has more facets to each one of the characters, and what's driving the overall scenario." Showrunner Courtney Kemp Agboh also emphasizes the female component of "Power." "The women in this show are fully realized characters," she says. "A lot of crime shows are not like that."

New York City is the perfect backdrop for these ideas, and it also allows for ethnic diversity within the cast. "You get to see something that's very representational of New York City, and really of America, and the world," Sikora points out. Agboh even designed the night club, which serves as the series' central location, to be a microcosm of the entire city.

"Power" premieres Saturday at 9 p.m. on Starz.

Working together

For 50 Cent, the biggest challenge has been getting the moving parts from the network and production sides working together. But he believes in "Power."

- "I've watched every single episode behind each other," he says. "The first sign that a show is a hit is when [it gets] better as it goes — and it completely does."

'The Postshow'

Deconstruction

"The Talkback," which will be rechristened "The Postshow" in Edinburgh, seems an ideal fit for the fest. The show lampoons the tradition of post-show Q&As, beginning with the end of a pretentious theater piece and then engaging the crowd in a part-scripted, part-improvised back and forth.

"This piece is a deconstruction of theater," says Wrenn, "so it's very apropos because a lot of the 2,000-plus shows at the festival are sincerely doing the thing that we're satirizing."

Taking back 'The Talkback'

Fringe. Local troupe deconstruct a show about deconstructing theater.

By the time "The Talkback" enjoyed a successful run at last year's Philadelphia Fringe Festival, the show, by The Berserker Residents, had already been through a year-and-a-half of development. Now "The Talkback" is headed for the Edinburgh Fringe Festival, and the Berserker Residents are tinkering with it again. Over the next three weeks, the company will present the show three times as part of FringeArts' Production Residencies program.

"We kind of want to take the wheels off the show — take it apart and look at all the parts of it, then put it back together again and get it into lean, mean fighting shape for when we go to Edinburgh," says co-founder Bradley K. Wrenn. "Each Sunday we may do the show entirely differently, maybe try something really dangerous and weird with the show just to see if we can make it grow and change."

On Broadway. It's theater's biggest night of the year.

T. MICHELLE MURPHY

Whether you're hosting a huge viewing party or just flipping channels so that you can stay topical at the water cooler on Monday, what follows is all you need to know about the 68th Tony Awards, which will air at 8 p.m. on CBS.

With 10 nominations, new musical "A Gentleman's Guide to Love and Murder" is one to watch this year. / JOAN MARCUS

1 Host: Sorry to be the bearer of bad news, but Neil Patrick Harris is not going to be wooing you with his remarkable talent, rapier wit and classic good looks this year. Instead, we're stuck with Hugh Jackman's remarkable talent, rapier wit and classic good looks. Oh, wait — that's not bad news at all! Carry on.

2 Best Musical: "A Gentleman's Guide to Love and Murder" swept this year's nominations with 10 nods. That could make it a hot contender for Best Musical, in part because two of its leads are up for Best Actor. That Sophie's Choice could be avoided by tossing the win to someone else entirely — say, Neil Patrick Harris — and making up for it with a hat-tip here. It's up against Carole King bio "Beautiful," Disney's "Aladdin" and musical revue "After Midnight," so the decision will make a huge impact on Broadway, determining whether we can expect to see more new musicals or another slew of remakes and jukebox hits in coming years.

3 Lead Actress, Musical: After 10 years, Idina Menzel made her way back to the Broadway stage — so does it matter whether her performance was actually better than, say, the charismatic Jessie Mueller as Carole King? Oh, but wait, we're totally overlooking someone, as usual: Kelli O'Hara has been nominated four times, and it's about time she gets her statue for "The Bridges of Madison County."

4 Lead Actress, Play: Although "Lady Day at Emerson's Bar & Grill" offers the songs of Billie Holiday, it's designated as a play. This means star Audra McDonald will have a shot at winning in all four acting categories, making her one of only five thespians who have done so. As her sixth Tony Award, this would also posit her as the record-holding female for the most Tony Awards of all time (surpassing Angela Lansbury and Julie Harris).

THE WORLD IS NOT ENOUGH FOR MODERN PRESIDENTS

Like chickens on a hot plate: That's how the Obama administration was dancing all week as it sought to explain the deal to bring Sgt. Bowe Bergdahl home after being held captive by the Taliban for "nearly" five years. White Housers and their pals defended the trade, spoke passionately about the need to rescue Bergdahl, and vigorously dismissed any claim that the president broke the law by failing to inform Congress as … well, as required by law.

But most of all, they were building ever higher, ever stronger ramparts around a principle: A sitting president ought to be able to do what he wishes to do.

Every president wants this, of course. After all, what good is the most powerful office on the planet if you can't use it? The idea of having to bow to Congress, the courts and the voters is well and good on paper, but all that takes time, and it's messy, and of those groups may tell you "No, we don't want what you're selling."

Presidents don't like being told that. So in recent years, through George W. Bush and now Barack Obama, we've heard more and more talk of "executive orders" as a primary means of pushing policy and getting around political gridlock.

It is hardly unprecedented, nor is it historic. The Roosevelts, Teddy and Franklin, bookend the Golden Age of Executive Orders, roughly 1901 to 1945. With the help of the in-between presidents (Taft, Wilson, Harding, Coolidge and Hoover) they unleashed the single longest barrage of imperial, or at least imperious, power the nation has ever seen.

But most of all they were building ever higher, ever stronger ramparts around a principle: A sitting president ought to be able to do what he wishes to do.

But we have divided government for a reason. The temptation of any president to behave in a more kingly fashion is fraught with risk. Yes, they can get things done that way, but they can also get things wrong. And as much as you may like a strong presidency when your guy or gal is in charge, one day, someday, somehow, another party will take over.

And then all that power, in one person's hands, may haunt you.

No jobs if everyone's drowning

Re: 'New coal regulations will hurt the poor, cost jobs'(Metro, June 4)

Letter writer George Christian asks why President Obama wants to regulate CO2 when that will kill jobs and hurt the poor. Could it be that the president thinks saving the planet is worth consideration? And if England's carbon tax is hurting its poor, I'd blame that on Margaret Thatcher's legacy.

Saving the planet benefits all of humanity; the cost should be borne by everyone, through taxes.

If free-market capitalism can't function without drowning half the planet, then it's time to try something else.
HARVEY WACHTEL, VIA EMAIL

At what cost do we continue to destroy the planet? How many billions will be spent repairing coast lines damaged by bigger storms caused by global warming? I applaud this "unnecessary change" in the name of humanity. I don't consider myself an environmentalist, just a realist.
ERIC SIDWELL, VIA EMAIL

Crown for Chrome?

History could be made at Belmont

California Chrome, a 3-5 favorite, is seeking to become the first Triple Crown winner in decades. If the horse can avoid the kind of misfortune that found other recent winners of the Kentucky Derby and Preakness, like Big Brown, there could be a new legend made at Saturday's Belmont Stakes in New York.

Phillies work to bring baseball to inner city

MLB. Since the Phillies NL East title in 2007, the RBI program has continued to grow in Philadelphia.

A number of black professional baseball players are the sons of former MLB stars. Two are in the Phillies locker room. John Mayberry Jr.'s dad was a slugger for the Kansas City Royals and Tony Gwynn Jr.'s father is a Hall of Famer.

"We were fortunate," Gwynn Jr. said. "Our fathers played ball in the majors. If only young African-American's could come into the clubhouse like I did when I was a kid and see this. It's a fun place to be right here. The kids today need to see how great baseball can be."

The aptly named RBI (Reviving Baseball in Inner Cities) program has been helping reintroduce baseball to the black community. The Phillies RBI program is thriving.

"We're one of the bigger RBI programs in the nation," Fan Development Program Manager/RBI administrator Jon Joaquin said. "I've been doing this for 14 years and we've expanded a great deal over the last decade in North Philadelphia, West Philadelphia and Southwest Philadelphia."

RBI is designed to provide youngsters from underserved communities the opportunity to play baseball and softball. There is a junior RBI program (6-12 years old) and RBI (13-18).

"The objective is to introduce and sustain baseball play for these children, but it's also more than that," Joaquin said. "We also try to hone life skills, sportsmanship and leadership, as well as teamwork."

According to Joaquin, the program's numbers surged since the Phillies started their run in 2007.

"The Phillies success helped the program expand," Joaquin said. "Kids from the inner city got behind their idols. They love Chase Utley, Ryan Howard and Jimmy Rollins. We've had a great deal of success."

There are 6,000 children participating in the Junior RBI program and 2,000 in the RBI segment in the Delaware Valley. But Gwynn Jr. believes more has to be done to expose urban youth to the joys of baseball.

"We have to figure something out to drive up the numbers," Gwynn Jr. said. "If only all kids knew how great baseball is to play. I chose it over the other sports."

So did Dee Gordon, who now starts at second base for the Dodgers. Gordon played basketball and football primarily until he picked up a glove at 17.

"It took him that long to focus on baseball," his father and former Phillies closer Tom Gordon said. "But he grew to love it and with his skill set has become a really good ballplayer. Baseball is a great choice for any kid. Most likely an athletic kid will be really good at a number of sports."

Take Dave Winfield, who was drafted by the Minnesota Vikings, Atlanta Hawks and San Diego Padres. Winfield wisely selected the latter and is enshrined in Cooperstown. During his Hall of Fame acceptance speech, he noted that he made the right choice, considering possible injury in football and his love of baseball.

"Yeah, but he was exposed to baseball and look what happened," Gwynn Jr. said. "We have to get these kids exposed to baseball any way we can."

Eagles in shape

Eagles compete in OTAs healthy and conditioned

The Eagles were extremely healthy last season.

In fact, take away the 16 games missed by Jeremy Maclin last year, and Eagles' starters, according to the Dallas Morning News, missed just 13 games last year — far and away the least in the NFL. The Jets missed 20 games to injury, nine fewer than the Eagles' full total of 29.

This continued health could mean two things for the Birds heading into 2014. Either they are in excellent shape, having fielded 14 players for all 16 games (a feat no other team equalled last season), or they are due for some injuries.

"We put a huge emphasis with the Eagles on recovery," center Jason Kelce told the Daily News. "I think that's one of the things that helped us stay injury-free last year, for the most part. A lot of that came down to luck, too."

The Eagles, led by Chip Kelly, are really emphasizing speed and conditioning in camp, running play after play at rapid speeds, sometimes just 15 seconds apart when run by veteran quarterback Nick Foles.

The tempo was fast last season, but with the health and endurance of the squad of returning players this season, NFL defenses better watch out — or hit the treadmill.

All signs point to the fastest-moving offense yet. EVAN MACY

Union CEO: United States prepared to host World Cup

MLS. Union CEO Nick Sakiewicz says Philadelphia could step up and host the 2022 Cup if there is a re-vote.

The United States last hosted the World Cup in 1994, an event that led to the birth of MLS. / GETTY IMAGES

As the country begins to shift its eyes toward the 2014 World Cup in Brazil, Philadelphia Union CEO Nick Sakiewicz can't help but wonder what it would be like to host the great competition here in Philly.

At an event on Monday outlining the Union's plans for viewing the World Cup around the city, Sakiewicz made it clear that although Qatar won the bid for the 2022 World Cup, the United States will keep fighting for the honor of being selected as the host nation.

"When Qatar's name got put up, the first thing I said was, 'That event's in 2022, that's a long way away and the story isn't written yet. This isn't over,'" Sakiewicz said. "The U.S. is prepared at a moment's notice to host a World Cup because we're one of the few country's that at a turn of a nickel can host the event."

Qatar is currently under investigation for bribing soccer officials to vote in their favor. If found guilty, UEFA president Michel Platini says there will be a re-vote.

Quoted

"It will continue to grow like the weed that soccer is in this country. It's been growing in your backyard for a while now and you can't kill it off."

Nick Sakiewicz, Union CEO, on continued growth of MLS

The United States hasn't hosted a World Cup since 1994. That single event changed U.S. soccer's popularity forever, according to Sakiewicz.

"The World Cup has profound impact on the countries that host them," said Sakiewicz. "United States soccer would not be where it is today if we never hosted the 1994 World Cup. The legacy that the World Cup leaves on a country is amazing."

The MLS was founded in 1993 as part of the deal for the United States to host the World Cup. In its inception, the league had 10 teams, had barely any fan base and was losing millions of dollars each year. The league now makes millions of dollars each year, it is broadcasting its games internationally and by 2015, the league will boast 21 teams.

"Back then we were considered a third-world soccer country," said Sakiewicz, alluding to 1994. "We were a country that didn't really have a big established professional league and we were a country that had low level professional and college players. … The MLS is now 19 years old and is the fastest growing sports league on the planet."

Sakiewicz is on Philadelphia's World Cup Board of Trustees. If the U.S. has the chance to host again, he'll do everything in his power to bring the games to Philly. For now his focus is on the 2014 World Cup, but regardless of the outcome he doesn't see the popularity of the sport slowing down anytime soon.

"Win, lose or draw for the United States will have zero impact on the growth of this sport," said Sakiewicz.

Union set to face Whitecaps before World Cup break

The Union (3-7-5) return to PPL Park this weekend to face the Vancouver Whitecaps (5-2-5).

The Union are coming off a 3-0 victory over Chivas USA (2-6-4) last weekend.

The Whitecaps are led by midfielder Pedro Morales who seems to always be in the right place on the offensive attack. He's tied for sixth in the league in goals (five) and third in the league in assists (five).

Maurice Edu will need to find a way to disrupt him in the midfield before he starts the attack.

The Union will not play again until June 28 when they travel to face New England, due to the World Cup break in mid-June.

The game will air at 7 p.m. Saturday on the Comcast Network.

DO NOT WRITE OFF THESE 'FORMER' STARS TOO EARLY

We are so quick to write players off in today's culture. Did someone have a bad year? Let's carve his tombstone with 140 characters.

These "burn me once" and "never again" attitudes lead to big opportunities if we can pinpoint the guys primed for a comeback. This year's fantasy football board is littered with them.

Griffin still had 3,203 passing yards and 489 rushing yards in 2013. / GETTY IMAGES

RG3 looks good

Robert Griffin III thought he was Adrian Peterson, trying to come back from a knee reconstruction in just nine months. It was a big mistake. Griffin was hobbled throughout a disastrous sophomore season, burning owners who were expecting an encore of his magical rookie campaign. But things are looking up for the exciting quarterback. Griffin will be 20 months removed from his surgery by the time Week 1 rolls around.

Foster program

Normally, writing off 28-year-old running backs with three 300-touch seasons in the last four years is a good idea. But not in the case of Arian Foster. He looked like he had plenty of juice left early last season, and should actually benefit from the back surgery that allowed him to rest for most of the last 12 months. There simply aren't many backs who have 300-carry, 60-catch upside.
